Summit Wireless Technologies, Inc.
Initiating Coverage with BUY and $7.00 Target
Leading technology and relationships should drive strong growth as demand for wireless speakers grows. We believe expected ramp up in commercialization makes risks/rewards attractive.

Initiating with BUY: We are initiating coverage of Summit with a BUY rating. The company develops wireless audio semiconductors for home entertainment and professional audio markets that are used by consumer electronics OEMs for use in their wireless speaker applications. The company also owns the WISA Association, which develops and maintains a standardized method of quality and interoperability between wireless audio components.

A large market potential for wireless speakers: The wireless audio market is expected to grow from $16.1 billion in 2016 to $31.8 billion by 2023 according to Markets and Markets research firm. Summit's technologies and products address the main issues of complexity and cost that are hindering the growth of the home theater. Summit is the only company with the capabilities of transmitting high resolution, low latency, synchronized wireless audio capable of supporting up to 8 channels. We believe Summit can become a leader in what we expect to be a fast growing market for wireless speakers.

Major partnership with leading OEMs: Summit's wireless modules are used by a growing list of consumer electronics customers, including Axxim, Bang & Olufsen, Enclave Audio, Klipsch, LG and Onkyo/Pioneer. There are speakers and systems utilizing Summit's technology currently in the market with a price range of ~$500 to over $40,000, though we note that Summit's ASP for its products are only ~$30.

Revenue just beginning: Summit's recent financial performance reflects its early stage in product commercialization for its audio chip module products. In its recent Q2 2018 report (which did not include the company's IPO which will be reflected in its Q3 report), the company reported revenue of $0.4 million, compared to Q1 2018's $0.3 million and $0.2 million in Q2 2017.

But design wins and products growing: Customers using Summit's technology currently have 25 – 30 products in the market and is expected to nearly triple by the end of the year. Summit aims for its partners and retailers to develop high quality systems to consumers at a wide range of price points.

However, challenges exist: Summit operates in a highly competitive environment and competes against a wide range of other companies and technologies. In addition, the company's wireless speaker products are significantly more expensive than traditional wired speaker products, so it is heavily dependent on being able to drive consumer demand for its higher priced, but higher quality speakers.

Early stage, but large sales opportunity: We acknowledge that Summit is still at an early stage in its product commercialization and revenue generation is still minimal, but we believe key financial and product milestones and sales and design wins traction in the next year should be positive catalysts for the stock.

Positive high risks versus rewards: We believe that the current valuation for Summit has already factored in many of its risks (principally its ability to grow sales) but is under valuing its overall growth prospects and product portfolio, resulting in a positive risk versus reward scenario for an investment in Summit.

Current valuation attractive: We calculate a 12-month price target for shares of Summit to be $7.00 based on a NPV analysis, representing significant upside from the current share price. We believe this valuation appropriately balances out the company's high risks with the company's high growth prospects and large upside opportunities.

Company Description
 Based in San Jose, CA, Summit sells audio semiconductor chips, modules and license IP to enable the WISA (Wireless Speaker and Audio) Association interoperability standards to deliver immersive wireless sound.
